

Each Little Speck of Doubting Dust

The mind is the most powerful instrument possessed by mankind, yet its power is virtually unknown. It is able to create and also to destroy. We can train it so it is full of trust in the divine, free of doubt, and able to be protectively creative. Or, we can allow a turbulent mind to play havoc in us. We must take refuge in wisdom so we may experience its resultant peace and protection, which peace is the bi-product of our unwavering faith. The sword of wisdom must cut asunder doubt.

Jesus said, “whosoever shall have no doubt in his heart, but believe what he sa’ith cometh to pass, he shall have it”.

Was he simply telling us we reap precisely what we sow?

Each little speck of doubting dust will disrupt our quest for peace and trust.
